Detroit Library Commission

Ninety-Fourth Annual Report Report of the President

To the Honorable, The Common Council of the City of Detroit

Gentlemen:

Many progressive changes have taken place in Detroit since the plans for the "new" Main Library building were completed in 1915. The population of the city has nearly trebled in size; industry has expanded and diversified; scientific and financial interests have broadened and the educational, social, and cultural life of the city has shown increasing vitality. To meet the requirements of a changing and more complex city, the Library has also changed. The Library's book collection and service programs have been broadened to meet the increased demands for book and magazine materials. This in turn has stimulated the people and industries of Detroit to make even greater use of the Library's services at the Main Library and at twenty-eight branches, even though the Main Library building has been overcrowded for years.

Two major problems are before the Commission at the present time: 1, the need for a greatly enlarged Main Library building and 2, the inadequacy of the book fund. The necessity for an increase in the book fund cannot be overemphasized. It is a problem of concern to the entire Commission and is explained more fully in the following report by the Director. As to the first problem, I am pleased to report that the crowded condition of the Main Library is to be solved in the near future. Contracts have been let for the substructure and the shell of the superstructure of a handsome addition to the Main Library building. This addition which is scheduled for completion in 1962 will more than double the size of the present Main Library building. The expanded physical plant will not only provide added space for readers and more books on the open shelves but also a better service arrangement of the book collection thus making it easier for everyone to use the Library.

During the past year, construction of a Service Shops building was completed. This building houses the bindery and maintenance shops. Most of these maintenance units were located in the basement of the Main Library building in space designed originally for other purposes and now needed urgently for those purposes.

IN MEMORIAM

It is with sincere sorrow that we record the loss to our Commission by death of one of its most conscientious and able members. Mrs. Hedley V. Richardson died on June 19, 1959, after eight years of distinguished service as a member of the Commission. She was the first woman ever appointed to the Library Commission and the first to serve as President, an office she held in 1955.

Mrs. Richardson was succeeded by Mrs. Mildred Jeffrey who was appointed on October 6, 1959, to fill the unexpired term.

A special word of appreciation is due the Friends of the Detroit Public Library, Inc. During the past year this organization has made substantial contributions to the Library with gifts totaling $34,856.00 in value.

| Memorial gifts                                | $   | 964.00    |
|---|------|-----------|
| Special contributions                         |      | 4,001.00  |
| Books purchased by the Friends of the Library |      | 14,406.00 |
| Gifts from individual members of the Friends. |      | 15,485.00 |
| Total   | 1 $ | 34,856.00 |

In addition to the gifts received by and through the Friends of the Detroit Public Library, Inc., mention should also be made here of the many gifts and bequests which have been made throughout the years. Outstanding among these are three permanent endowment funds. In 1921 Clarence M. Burton, some years after giving his valuable collection of books and manuscripts, presented the Library with an endowment fund (which today amounts to $325,000) to aid in the development of the Burton Historical Collection, the foremost collection of original and published materials on the history of the Canadian and American Great Lakes regions. A few years later Mrs. Theodore A. McGraw, Jr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Lightner established a $20,000 endowment fund to honor Dr. Theodore A. McGraw and Dr. Theodore A.

McGraw, Jr. The most recent endowment, received in 1948, is a $10,000 endowment fund from the estate of Mrs. Grace W. Biddle. The income from both the McGraw and Biddle funds is used for the purchase of medical books.

Books, buildings, and personnel are the three basic elements common to all library systems. Though this report has emphasized the need for more books and an expanded physical plant, the third successful element for a successful library—personnel—should not be overlooked. On behalf of the Library Commission, I would like to pay tribute to the Director and his competent staff who have done such an outstanding job in the face of serious shortages in both books and personnel.

Respectfully submitted,

HARVEY M. MERKER

President, Detroit Library Commission

Report of the Director

New Books are the lifeblood of a library. Unless an adequate supply of new publications is added as they come from the presses of the world, a library can very quickly become a "dated" institution, one no longer able to serve a useful purpose in meeting the problems of today and in planning solutions to those of tomorrow. The older books give a library background and depth; the new books give it timeliness for which there is no substitute.

During recent years a combination of circumstances has created a situation at the Library which threatens to become critical unless a plan for major corrective measures is instituted soon. The basic problem is the declining state of the book collection due to inadequate current intake of new books. The factors which have created the near crisis will need little explanation. Nearly all are familiar to people because they have been evident elsewhere.

Decreasing buying power

Foremost is the shrinkage in purchasing power of the dollar. A book fund that has during the past ten years been increased only to provide for new branch libraries to serve new areas and has not had increases to compensate for inflation, inevitably buys fewer books than formerly for every department and every branch. This has resulted in a continually decreasing supply of books just when the need for more books is expanding.

Book costs have risen faster than the cost of living

Using the 1947-49 Base, Detroit's Cost-of-Living Index in 1958 was 123.3%. Book Prices in nearly all subjects for the same period had risen to much higher levels as the following figures show:

|                        | 0    |
|------------------------|------|
| Art                    | 161% |
| Business               | 169% |
| Economics              | 153% |
| Education              | 140% |
| Poetry                 | 144% |
| Science and Technology | 166% |
| Fiction                | 132% |

Empty shelves—in both old and new branch libraries—emphasize the dwindling book collection

Limited book choice affords limited stimulus for young minds

Growing need for books

- 1. The educational level of people generally has been raised. It is apparent that the number of high-school graduates, as well as the number of college graduates, has grown enormously in the past decade. Though the Library serves far more people than those with diplomas, the raising of the educational level has created broader and more extensive book requirements for people who no longer are in school.
- 2. School programs too have changed. Today the teaching program is less confined to textbooks than was the case twenty-five years ago. Students are now trained for independent study and analysis by assignments which require extensive and intensive use of library books.
- 3. New areas of knowledge are constantly increasing the number of subjects for which books must be bought each year. Nuclear energy, space exploration, and automation are making new demands on the book budget just as television did ten years ago. Since the invention of TV, thousands of books covering every phase of the subject from the scientific and practical to the entertainment aspects have had to be purchased, with no increase in book funds. As long as telecasting continues, these purchases will have to be made, not only for the Main Library but for all the branches as well.
- 4. The research programs of industry and scholars have created a need for bringing into Detroit more and more highly specialized publications from every part of the world. At the same time the expanding school enrollments have created a need for more and more copies of unspecialized nontechnical books.

Effect of shrinking funds and expanding reader needs on the book collection

The first way of attempting to effect the economies necessary to provide the required spread of book titles was to reduce the number of copies bought of any particular book. This has created a situation in which readers know the Library has a book in its collection but are unable to get it for it is seemingly always "out."

The turnover of the book stock is from seven to eight times a year in more than three-fourths of the branch libraries. Such an excessively heavy use of the available books inevitably creates the need for substantial funds merely to replace books that must be retired each year because of being physically worn out.

Comparison with other libraries

Knowing that all the factors which have created our local problem have occurred elsewhere through the country—inflation, growth of industrial research, increasing enrollments at schools, new subjects that had to be included in library purchases—I assembled figures on book funds for other libraries of like size and complexity to compare with those of this Library. The results are given below.

It will take some time to rebuild the Library's book collection. But the reconstruction cannot and should not be deferred. Nor should half measures in the form of one- or two-year palliatives be adopted. Therefore, a program for financing the project has been developed. This is presented as a major need of the Library for the near and the long future.
